REPORT

Agreement No. 2005/076 between United Nations Industrial Development Organization and Instituto Nacional de Tecnología Industrial.-
(UNIDO Project No.MP/ARG/04/018)
Training of technicians in refrigeration systems in Argentina.-

The courses on good practices in refrigeration techniques were intended for air conditioning and refrigeration technicians working in the area of residential and commercial refrigeration system service and repair. The main objective of the courses was to discuss the problem of ozone depletion (its causes and consequences) as well as the need to minimize or completely remove CFC emissions into the atmosphere during maintenance and repair of air conditioning equipment and fixed installations. The selected methodology was a suitable tool for the application of good practices in refrigeration and in coolant management and preservation activities.

Upon course completion the participants developed skills to use appropriately the existing techniques and technologies for leak minimization, CFC recovery and recycling, and use of alternative coolants for the existing CFC-based units.

The course consists of a theoretical portion and a workshop or practical portion. The theoretical subjects include: ozone depletion, national regulations, general refrigeration concepts, general good practices in services, residential and commercial refrigeration and air conditioning, recovery, recycling, and regeneration, refrigeration compressors, alternative coolants and technologies, hydrocarbon use in refrigeration. The workshop covered practices in leak detection, coolant charging, coolant recovery and recycling.

The general management of the training was under the charge of three areas of the institution.

A detail of the tasks performed by each area is included below:

Outreach & Development, in charge of the following tasks:

- a) Telephone arrangements with all offices in the country for course organization and delivery (time schedules, material, venue, enrolment, financial details)
- b) Certificate distribution and management of communications regarding course delivery.
- c) Control and issuance of payments for invoices submitted by offices.-

- d) Issuance and distribution of 1500 certificates
- e) Brochure preparation and delivery
- f) Arrangements for the printing of course manuals and support material

Training performs the following tasks:

- g) Course organization, coordination and monitoring
- h) Database development for all students and instructors in all offices in the country.

Environment Program performs the following tasks:

- i) Assists in collection management
- j) Administrative arrangements with the Secretariat for Development and Sustainable Development and UNIDO
- k) Preparation of administrative and accounting reports

Fifty-one out of the 60 courses planned were carried out.

Regarding the organization, expectations were more than satisfied.-

Course evaluations highlighted the active participation, the quality of the theoretical and practical information provided, plus the clear explanations of the instructors, reflected in the high success rate.

The management provided by the Institution, which involved shared work and responsibilities, received positive comments.

Attached is a list of the courses, participants with their corresponding evaluation grades, the evaluation poll, copy of one certificate and Technical Unit Requirements (internal invoices for work execution by different INTI areas).
