For several years, UNIDO has been providing a technological information service to both developing and developed countries, mainly through its Industrial and Technological Information Bank (INTIB) based in Vienna. Given the ever increasing demand for information it was decided to decentralize the operation and today UNIDO has a network of over 80 national and 4 regional autonomous focal points capable of responding to clients' needs within the shortest possible time.

This directory is an integral part of the system. It has been drawn up in co-operation with the Austrian Federal Economic Chamber and provides an overview of Austrian industrial and technological information relevant to the principal sectors of industry and identifies specialized information in the country.

This directory has been specially designed for use by the INTIB focal points of UNIDO. It can however serve any other body concerned with supplying information to developing countries. Simple to use, it permits the rapid identification of Austrian organizations that can reply to a precise enquiry, be it related to raw material, technology, supplier, potential partner, product or manufacturing process. Furthermore, the directory provides a contact name and indicates the method of reply: a list of companies, assistance in bringing companies together or a cost estimate for research or a project.

This initiative not only strengthens the responsive capacity of the UNIDO network, but it also provides entrepreneurs better access to technologies and know-how available in other countries. In an industrial climate characterized by knowledge intensity, information is a crucial input.

I, thus, welcome the close collaboration between the Austrian Federal Economic Chamber and UNIDO and the contribution they have made to the global sharing of industrial and technological information that serves the cause of industrial development across the globe.

Maurizio De Maria, Director
UNIDO Director General

Economic development in the closing years of this millenium is characterized by permanent challenges requiring constant adaptation and reorientation. Replies are in the line of technonovations and unconventional high-tech solutions. The realization that they, in turn, serve as pacemakers for a broad range of other industrial activities has gained a prominent place on the international economic agenda.

In the past years, the Austrian Federal Economic Chamber (AFEC), within its foreign trade promotional activities, has paid special attention to foster the internationalization of the Austrian economy. The well known Austrian imperative "exportare necesse est" does not only refer to export activities, but, to a growing extent, to all kinds of industrial cooperation with foreign partners as an important strategic means to meet the fierce competition in the worldmarket.

To assist in accelerating this trend, in 1980 IPS Vienna was set up under AFEC funding and has since successfully operated as a link between UNIDO and the Austrian industrial community. Thus, the long lasting collaboration between AFEC and UNIDO was further strengthened. In 1986 technology transfer became a major issue within the foreign trade department of AFEC, followed in 1989 by efforts to strengthen the internationalization of Austrian enterprises via a specific consultancy program handled by a specially installed group within the foreign trade department - I & ITV.

The joint issue of the present directory of "Austrian Sources of Industrial and Technological Information" represents a further intensification of the collaboration between AFEC and UNIDO and will considerably contribute to making Austrian technologies still better known to other countries by being distributed within the worldwide networks both of UNIDO's focal points and AFEC's 90 foreign trade offices. It contains pertinent academic and other research institutions, innovation centres and firms active in the realm of new technologies who, as potential partners, may be consulted for such information.

Therefore I warmly welcome the joint initiative for editing this reference handbook as a useful instrument to make new high-tech ideas "Made in Austria" more readily accessible to other countries.

Leopold Maderthaner
President of AFEC

INDUSTRIAL AND TECHNOLOGICAL INFORMATION BANK

Facilitating access to industrial, technological and business information

INTIB (Industrial and Technological Information Bank) coordinates the activities of the information sector of UNIDO (United Nations Industrial Development Organization). Its principal aim is to facilitate access by companies of developing countries to the information that they require. INTIB also encourages the creation of new or the strengthening of existing industrial information systems in developing countries.

The Question-and-Answer Service and the International Referral System

INTIB produces a variety of printed and electronic products and offers a question-and-answer service, accessible through different communication channels. The International Referral System redirects queries received by INTIB to a wide range of well targeted sources of industrial, technological and business information.

The INTIB worldwide network

To increase its information role in the developing countries INTIB has developed a worldwide network of over 80 national and 4 regional autonomous focal points with INTIB at the hub. The focal points, which have full support from INTIB, keep in close touch with local markets, packaging information for their needs.

INTIB's Information Bank

INTIB's information bank is composed of all UNIDO's internal information banks, which are either factual or bibliographical. For example, they are used in the management of the referral system as well as for finding information linked to industrial development.

INTIB's co-operation with national organizations

This publication is one example of co-operation between international and national organizations. The Industrial Promotion Service (IPS) Vienna as part of the worldwide UNIDO network of a total of 10 IPS offices and funded by AFEC acts as a link between the Austrian industry and UNIDO with the task of promoting industrial co-operation in the broadest possible sense between Austrian firms and entrepreneurs in developing countries. In discharging of this task it co-operates closely with appropriate departments and divisions in AFEC, in particular with I & ITV / Internationalization and International Technology Transfer and with the 90 Austrian Foreign Trade Offices around the world. Mine surveying
Petroleum engineering
Metallurgy
Ceramics, refractories, cement and glass
Mining and heavy machinery engineering
Polymer engineering and science
Material sciences
Applied geosciences
Industrial environmental protection and techniques and recycling

Figures: 2.300 students; 500 scientific personnel (including 40 professors).

Activities: The Institute for external relations of the Mining University of Leoben promotes industrial contacts by visiting, advising and helping the industry. It offers the know-how and the facilities of the Mining University concerning prospecting, mining and processing of raw materials, development, fabrication and optimization of materials such as metals, ceramics, glass and plastics, process technology with application of modern sensing and acting devices, ranging-, controlling- and automation, plans the use of electronic data processing, microelectronic and laser techniques. It also consults in fundamental sciences like mathematics, physics, chemistry, electrical engineering and mechanics and offers cost planning (budgeting), quality assessment, enterprise planning and the public scientific university library.

Figures: 10.000 students, 700 scientific personnel, ca. 250 scientific projects, 50% of the projects are financed by industry. 64 scientific institutes offer more than 2.500 different lectures and courses.

Activities: The industrial liaison office of the Graz University of Technology (Ausseninstitut der TU-Graz) offers information on university experts and R&D-projects aided by a powerful information system and several written documentations (e.g. R&D-offers and requests, diploma thesis and dissertations) as well as comprehensive information on 15.000 Austrian companies (TASK database - mode of access on request). Furthermore, technology transfer and continuing education for engineers from inside and outside the university is stimulated by the organization of workshops and lectures on current problems in science and technology.
